SURF UNDERMINED MOANA'S HAU TREES

The surf in front of the Moana and Seaside beaches has wrought much damage in the past few weeks, changing the contour of the beach, but in the past week the waves had encroached so far into the sand banks that the fine hau trees which were being trained over a pergola were menaced.

Manager Hertsche of the Moana Hotel had to put a force of men at work to take the hau trees out and shift them to holes about twelve feet back of their old position. The pergola itself is held in position by supports and ropes, while a few trees which were more exposed than the others were swept into the sea.
